Brain vs. Brawn.

THE part played and to be played by athletics in our schools is of interest to every parent and taxpayer, particularly now, when after a scathing denunciation by one of our leading college Presidents, athletics are to be introduced into the grammar schools of San Francisco with renewed vigor and no small amount of expenditure. Athletics in our universities are the basis of college spirit and it is a fact that among collegians themselves the brawny athletic is idolized and the delicate devotee of learning despised. Notwithstanding the distortion of ideals the minute a man passes from his alma mater he finds that the world looks for more than physical prowess in the college graduate and he pulls himself together and prefers to be capable of exhibiting some intellectual claims in contests with his fellows. He begins to recognize the fact that college football, tennis, track records and regattas have not given him any of the best of it in the struggle for existence other than could have been gained in the free-for-all work out of doors such as gardening, farming, riding, hunting or fishing. The exercise whenever taken advantage of develops the physical and upon this side the college man has none the better of many who never had the chance to participate in student athletics. Physical prowess is a great thing in the struggle for existence but the college brand is not the only kind.

There can be no doubt that systematic gymnasium work is very necessary and that some athletics are to be commended in this period of educational work where too much application would be disastrous, but that there should be more moderation and less hero-worship of educated brawn there is no question.

There is scarcely any danger of grammar school boys applying themselves too closely to their work as at this age the pupils have a superabundance of animal spirits which they will work off before and after school hours with the usual romp and play of the average school boy. Just why we should prescribe athletics at this stage is hard to explain, while much can be said against it. There is scarcely stamina enough about the grammar school boy, who averages twelve years, to keep his mind off the contests which enthrall him outside of the school room. His athletic thoughts will be harder to shape and the work for teachers will increase accordingly. His ideals will no longer be confined to Washington, Tennyson, Goethe or Ruskin, but these will be overshadowed by the gridiron, the diamond, the field and the arena. It will result in turning out recruits who will further promote college athletics and will give us more patrons of the sports than the arts and sciences. One would imagine that American students and school children were going to study themselves to death, but with few exceptions there is little danger of over-application. We don't want intellectual development at the expense of the physical, but there is now a tendency toward the other extreme.

THE observer grows more hopeful when it becomes apparent that some public institutions reach out beyond their four walls to grasp hope and a future for their inmates. The Boys and Girls' Aid Society has gone into camp near Sebastopol in this county in the midst of all the honest toil and beauties of that section, where they, too, are to be honest toilers and useful members of society for a while and will no doubt grasp the truth of righteous living and good citizenship as a key to the future. What little of good but impracticable teaching along these lines manager to zig-zag through the days in the city comes to them now in a practical deluge up there in the country where everything is so clean and wholesome and bright. The right way of living is apparent and a natural life away from the institution and the city's artificial life and corruption will help to mould a different destiny for many of these children.

Will Bake American Bread.

Cantoni & Pinelli, who have reopened the Old City Bakery in the Barbarin building, have engaged the services of an experienced baker and will make a specialty of French and American bread. Orders will be promptly attended to and bread fresh from the oven will be delivered to hotel and families every morning. Now here is an opportunity to support a home enterprise and at the same time obtain a superior article of American bread, large quantities of which is baked in San Francisco and other cities, shipped here and consumed by our people.

PERSONALS.

Russell, the seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Salomonson, is dangerously ill with acute pneumonia.

Dr. C. J. Schmelz and family are preparing to leave Sonoma and will go to Eagle's Nest, on the Russian river, where the doctor has a country home. When the doctor will have fully recovered his health, which has been quite poor for several months, he will again resume the practice of medicine.

FRESH INSPIRATION.

Napoleon and His Attitude Toward the Common Soldier.

Napoleon understood human nature. He recognized the great truth, "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he," and knew how to apply it not only to himself and his own ambitious projects, but to other men as well. Moreover, he knew precisely the right moment to apply it to quicken the spark of divine energy which smolders in every man, although the ashes of fatigue and failure may cover its light temporarily.

A French soldier carried a dispatch to Napoleon. Just as he delivered it into the hands of the emperor his spent horse dropped dead. Napoleon wrote an answer to the dispatch, then, dismounting from his own horse, he handed the horse to the soldier.

"Take this horse and ride back, comrade," he said.

"Nay, sire," stammered the soldier, gazing at the blooded horse and its trappings. "It is too magnificent and grand for me, a common soldier."

"Take it!" commanded Napoleon. "There is nothing too grand and magnificent for a soldier of France."

The soldier mounted and rode away on his perilous business, ready and willing, and Napoleon's words, repeated through the ranks and columns of his army, gave to his tired troops fresh inspiration and energy. "Nothing too grand and magnificent for a soldier of France!" they said, and the thought that they were worthy of the best inspired them to the mighty deeds which followed.

WIFELY ORDERS.

Two Men Obeyed Them, but the Third Man Balked.

"Three men sat rather late at the club one night," said the man who is responsible for the story. "As they were separating they discussed a little nervously the reception that awaited them at their wives' hands and agreed that he who did not do what his wife told him on getting home should have to treat the others to a turkey dinner. The first man after reaching his house stumbled about the dark bedroom till he kicked the cat. The cat squealed, and the man's wife, raising her head from the pillow, moaned, 'Well, go on; kill the poor cat and have done with it.' The man frowned and muttered to himself, 'It is a case of kill the cat or pay for the dinner.' So he killed the cat."

"The second man on his arrival could not find any matches. As he looked for some in the drawing room he bumped against the piano, and his wife complained, 'Why don't you break the piano, carelessness? Determined not to lose his bet, the man got a hatchet, and the sound of crashing blows soon filled the house.'

"The third man, getting home, stumbled on the way upstairs. His wife screamed angrily, 'Go on, fall down stairs and break your neck, do!' 'Not me,' said the third man after a moment's thought. 'I'll pay for the turkey dinner.'"—Chicago News.

A Merchant's Memory.

Among the characteristics which made for the success of Mr. A. T. Stewart, the great New York merchant, says Richard Lathers in his "Reminiscences," was an extraordinary memory for the details of his vast business.

One day as Mr. and Mrs. Lathers were leaving the store Mr. Stewart accosted them at the door.

"I hope, Mrs. Lathers, you have found what you want," he said.

"No, Mr. Stewart," she replied. "I want a very plain Brussels carpet for a small library, a light color with a small blue figure. You have a great variety, but nothing just like that."

"I am quite sure we have that exact description," he said, and, turning to a clerk, added: "Go to the third floor and get out from the last invoice of carpets No. 2206. I think the style and pattern will just suit Mrs. Lathers."

To the amazement of the shopper it proved to be the very thing she was looking for.

Consider the Birds of the Air.

An eminent ornithologist calls attention to the fact that a crane can travel through the air a thousand miles a day without flapping its wings, but by merely keeping them stretched and adjusted to the prevailing breezes. A hawk can stay in the air for days and weeks, moving with its wings motionless. It is the same with the gulls and numerous other winged creatures. In studying the science of aerostatics consider the birds of the air.—Boston Herald.

For Winter Use.

A lady farmer planted a garden. She was very proud of her prospective peas, but when her husband asked if they were ripe she said, "Oh, they haven't come up yet."

"Haven't come up yet? Why, the season's nearly over."

"Yes," she said, "but I planted canned peas. I think they came up a little late."—New York Times.

A Keen Observer.

"Who was that fool you bowed to?" "My husband."

"Oh, I—er—I—humbly apologize." "Never mind. I'm not angry. But what a keen observer you are!"—London Scraps.

Bitter Revenge.

Tommy Figg—Sister's beau kicked my dog yesterday, but I let even tell him, you bet. Johnny Briggs—How? Tommy Figg—I mixed quinine with her face powder.—Indianapolis Journal.

Bad Night For the Show.

Plooting an unknown show through a starling territory is no cinch, but I have thought out a good idea. In anticipation of each engagement I am going to call out the reserves and when they are out they will be invited in. That will help fill the house.

You have heard of the various excuses for light business—"because the night is so dark," etc. This is a hot one:

"Young man," said the local manager to the agent on his first tour, "why do you bring your troupe here on a Saturday night? Don't you know you won't do any trade?"

"What's the difference between Saturday night and any other night?" asked the agent.

"Because everybody's getting shaved."—New York World.

Too Easy.

The Union bank of St. Petersburg has its own police service. One night the director was sleeping. He wondered whether the bank police were really trustworthy. He concluded to make a trial. He disguised himself and rushed, pistol in hand, into the bank vault. The police were good for nothing. They looked on quietly, while the director pocketed 2,000,000 rubles and carried them away. Since then no one has seen the director.—Simplex.

His Rush.

Boy (reading)—She threw herself into the river. Her husband, horror-stricken, rushed to the bank—Teacher (cutting in)—Why did the husband rush to the bank? Boy—Please, sir, to get the insurance money.—London Mail.

For penknives the steel is tempered at 470 degrees, for table knives at 500 degrees and for saws at 550 degrees.

His Investment.

Old Lady (who had given the tramp a nickel)—Now, what will you do with it? Hungry Hobo—Waal, ye see, mum, if I buy an auto there ain't enough left to hire a shofur, so I guess I'll git a schooner. I kin handle that meself.—Bohemian.

Cautious.

"How did pa act when you asked him for my hand?"

"Very gentle and courteous. It quite took me by surprise."

"I told him you used to be a pugilist."—Kansas City Independent.

From the Start.

Attorney—When did your husband first show signs of insanity, madam? Wife—The day he married me. I then discovered he was making only $10 a week.

One Gift She Missed.

Six-year-old Harry wanted to buy his sister a little birthday present. His heart throbbled with joy at the thought, though he had in his pocket only 10 cents. Nevertheless a week ahead of time he went around the shops and came back with a very satisfied look. His mother asked him what he had bought.

"I got her a cream puff," he said.

"Well, you know, Harry," said his mother, "that won't keep fresh for a week."

"That's what I thought after I bought it, mother," replied Harry calmly, "and so I ate it."—Ladies' Home Journal.

How Fast He Could Go.

A breeder and trainer of race horses who is known almost as well in England as he is here recently sold a horse to an Englishman. The Englishman before paying for the horse exhibited a bit about the price and then said:

"You know, I'd like to see the horse first just to see how fast he can go."

"Never mind about that," said the trainer. "He can't go any faster than I can tell it."—New York Sun.
